Fertilizer Financial Markets Commentary/Curves

NOLA FUTURES & SWAPS

UREA

Values were off slightly in the deferred futures market today with Q1 trading through yesterday's value to $233 down from the upper $230s last week. In the physical market November barges traded $219.50 after trading at $220 yesterday. Overall, the market seems slightly softer ahead of the election tonight but few think there is a correlation there.

UAN

UAN bids on Q1 started to creep up today with April trading again at $145 after trading there last week. Buyers are starting to get more optimistic as the fall goes on for the Q1 timeframe.

DΔD

NOLA DAP futures were a touch softer today for the January contract with value now in the mid $340s after last trading at $348 last week. In the physical market we saw November barges trade in the low $350s slightly lower than where we saw physical trade at last week, but still seeing demand in the $350s.

INTERNATIONAL FUTURES

Intl paper markets were largely quiet again today. AG paper was slightly firmer, with a touch more interest from the buy side and sellers less motivated. However, most participants continue to look for the next price signal from the physical market with paper values tracking sideways.
