Fertilizer Derivatives End of Day Report

NOLA FUTURES & SWAPS

LIREA

After seeing September NOLA urea barges trade as high $552 last week, we saw offers drift down to $535 today with bids seen as high as $515. Value seems to be drifting now that we're seeing operations resume in the gulf and the logistical kinks get ironed out. However, values on NOLA UREA futures were mostly sideways today trading $487 for the Q4 contract, in line with where we saw value at to end the week last week. It was mostly a slow day with softer phys nearby market and a stable paper market.

INTERNATIONAL FUTURES

Sentiment was largely positive, but intl paper markets were quiet today. Helwan was reported to have sold 10kt of physical product at $480/mt fob Egypt, however buying interest on paper hasn't quite reached those levels. AG futures meanwhile saw bid support through Q4, with values now seen in the upper 460s, if not higher. Late in the day however, 465 was sold for October futures, following sharper physical offers in the Nola market - the trade was down $2 on last done from Friday. Buying interest in Brazil paper was more patchy, with offers in the nearby October contract not gaining much attention.
