Fertilizer Derivatives End of Day Report

NOLA FUTURES & SWAPS

UREA

In the NOLA market today we saw futures mostly unchanged with most of the attention focused on physical. In the physical market, it seemed like prices were going to push higher with $808-$811 trading for JAN, and $808-$811 trading for FEB in the morning session for barges. Then as the afternoon went on buyers did seems less enthusiastic and near COB we saw offers on JAN with little bid interest. In the futures market, value still seems to be in the $840s for Q1 trading $840 and $843 for JAN and FEB with a large discount happening in Q2 right now with MAY trading at $815 today. Overall it's just a quiet day for the most part.

UAN

UAN values were supported today, bids got close to $600 across the forward curve but offers were no where in sight. There aren't too many traders who will go short this UAN market right now in the paper market. Dec traded today $600.

INTERNATIONAL FUTURES

Slower day in intl urea paper, as can tend to be the case as Indian tenders approach. Sentiment remains positive and outlook for prices to remain firm, but there was a lack of fresh conviction following yesterday's moves higher – values largely tracked sideways as a result. All was not completely quiet however; in the physical market new highs were reported out of Brazil with a sale at $875-880/mt cfr heard to have been concluded.
