Fertilizer Derivatives End of Day Report

FUTURES MARKET COMMENTARY

NOLA UREA: It was a mixed bag in NOLA today, we saw phys soften in the nearby but futures didn't drift as much holding steady but on thin activity with all the trading done in Q1. The Q1 NOLA UREA futures traded at $720, about $5 down from where we saw value at COB yday. Interesting dynamic in the market, the Indian Tender was of course announced today, but that annoucement seems like it was already priced into the market, because if anything we saw a down move today in the market on profit takers willing to sell into the rally that never came to fruition. Of course the negative news in the market today was the price move on European gas, down ~8% today after being down ~14% yesterday. It's interesting because from the conversations we had today the majority of clients say they are sill bullish the market but yet no one seems willing to pay up today to get something done in the hopes that prices continue to drift and there are better opportunities to buy later on..

INTL: We got news of India announcing their latest tender, indicative 1 million t, closing on 9 September for shipment by 21 October. The market was initially bullish, and we saw Egypt - NOV trade at 875 and then up at 900. Across the rest of the contracts, we were hunting for bids as we saw offers come in and the market seemed to turn bearish. As Dutch TTF drops again, last done 254 (17:00 UK time) and Polish production is set to open back up.
