Market Commentary / Recent Trades

Iron ore extended further gains on Thursday supported by higher-than-expected manufacturing data. The purchasing managers' index (PMI) for China's manufacturing sector in Aug ticked up another month to 49.7 vs the forecast 49.4, up 0.4 index point from July but below the 50 marks for the fifth consecutive month, National Bureau of Statistics (NBS) reported on Thursday. Nevertheless, the output and new orders for the steel industry grew to 51.9 and 50.2, along with major commodity imports including crude oil, iron ore and coal also showing a strong growth in Aug. A more active session today with front months opening higher and steadying the high levels over the London morning. Sept briefly traded at around $115.8 before climbing above $116, eventually closing near the day's high at $116.4. Oct as the active contract spent most of the session hovering around $114 in consistent liquidity. Not much action was on spreads today with highlighted trades Sept/Oct trading at $2.1 in 50kt and Sept/Nov at $3.75 in 25kt.
