Market Commentary / Recent Trades

Iron ore futures commenced the Singapore morning at 137.90, displaying robust early gains that surged to a peak of 139.65 by mid-morning. Subsequently, the prices experienced a slight decline and maintained a stable range on the front month. Despite the approaching Christmas break, there has been notable liquidity, evidenced by a significant trading volume of 4 million mt during the T+1 session last night. This heightened activity could be attributed to speculations surrounding imminent NDRC news.

On the spreads Dec/Jan has traded in size in the market and Jan/Feb has traded 1.40 here in decent size today.
