

Oil and Energy Market News

Crude prices are edging lower today after nearly a 2% gain yesterday, as markets digest uncertainty following the US removal of Venezuela's Maduro over the weekend and ongoing risks to Russian supply, against a backdrop of expected oversupply.

•President Trump said the US may subsidise oil company investment in Venezuela and that drawing on oil reserves would help lower prices. He is expected to meet US oil executives this week to discuss increasing Venezuelan output, Reuters reported, although current low prices deter investment and any spending would require confidence in political stability.

•Opposition leader Maria Corina Machado said she aims to turn Venezuela into a US energy hub but confirmed she has not spoken with Trump since Oct. 10. The Wall Street Journal reported that the CIA advised allowing the current regime to remain in place, while Trump said elections would be held at an appropriate time.

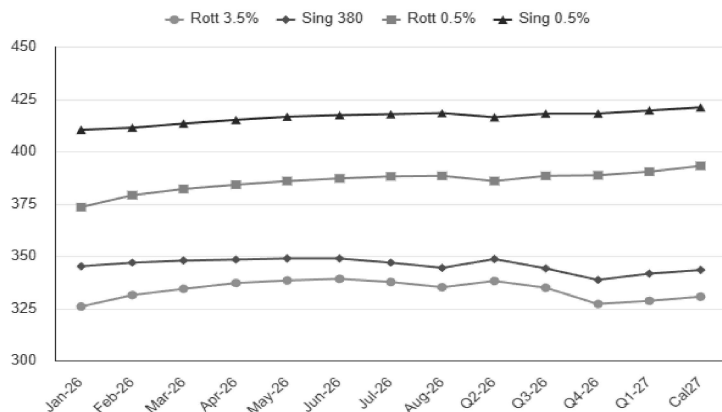

•Chinese buyers have avoided Venezuelan crude offers this week as prices climbed following the US blockade of sanctioned tankers.
