

Oil and Energy Market News

Crude prices are higher today, with Brent trading near the upper end of yesterday's range, as markets balance elevated geopolitical risk following US actions in Venezuela against expectations of an oil market surplus later this year. Brent MAR 26 is up 2%. US President Trump has said that US involvement in Venezuela's oil sector could drive prices down toward $50/bbl, a level he reportedly prefers, according to the WSJ. Delcy Rodriguez stated that Venezuela remains open to energy partnerships that are mutually beneficial. US Energy Secretary Wright said Venezuelan oil output could increase by as much as 40% within 6–12 months with US support. Chevron has sought approval to expand a key operating licence and to sell Venezuelan crude to additional buyers, Reuters reported.
