

Oil and Energy Market News

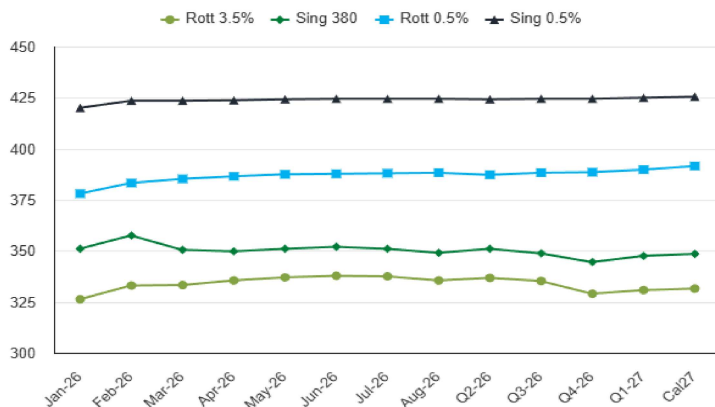

Crude prices have pulled back from yesterday's high around $66.82/bbl as sentiment softened after US President Trump sought to ease market anxiety about potential military action against Iran and geopolitical risks. The drop also comes as US forces continue to seize sanctioned tankers linked to Venezuela. Brent MAR 26 is down 4.1% Trump signalled he may hold off on attacking Iran for now, with reassurance from contacts that Tehran would stop killing protesters, reducing the immediate risk premium in oil markets. NBC reported that while Trump still favours decisive action, advisers have been unable to guarantee that military strikes would quickly topple the Iranian regime. The security alert level at the US Al Udeid air base in Qatar has been lowered, sources told Reuters. Trump also commented that it might be better for Venezuela to remain in OPEC, though he was unsure if that would benefit the US.
